

Country Economic Diagnostics of selected economies in Sub- Saharan Africa

Project Title	Country Economic Diagnostics of selected economies in Sub-Saharan Africa
Project Summary	Country Economic Review (CER) is a synthesis of economic analysis and data to examine and interpret a nation's economic environment and opportunities for inclusive growth. Policies for inclusive growth are an important component of most government strategies for economic development and poverty red
Country	United States

Project Description

Inclusive and broad based growth is need for substantial poverty reduction The objective of this project is to develop a diagnosis of the country's economic development, the country's own economic goals, the constraints to achieving these goals and the opportunities to overcome these constraints. The analysis will in particular: identify the constraints that could be effectively addressed through public policy and the constraints to private investment and private sector development.

In addition to collection of data and analysis, the project will also draw results from existing publically available analyses on the selected countries. The results from the project are expected to inform USAID programming in the country as USAID develops its assistance strategies.

Required Skills or Interests

Skill(s)

Analytical writing

Data analysis

Economic analysis

Research

Additional Information

None

Language Requirements

None